ANOTHER EXTRAORDINARY RAIN-

A brief dispatch from Salt Lake City informs us that on Tuesday last, therwas a heavy storm in that valley; that it extended generally over the Territory; that the lightning was very severe and several persons were injured by it, and that the fall of hail and rain was unparalleled in that region. This is a remarkable phenomenon, particularly in connection with the pleasant surprises of liberal rains which the people of Utah and the neighboring State and Territories have experienced every month this year. Those people say that a great change for good is coming over their climate, that it has been in progress for the last ten or fifteen years, and very remarkably from year to year since the construction of the Pacific railroad. They tell us that Great Salt Lake is now higher than it was ever known to be at this season heretofore; that since Fremont's discovery and explorations of the lake in 1844—45 it has never been so low as then at the end of the dry season, as he reports it, and that from a period soon after the first sottlement in the valley by the Mormons the rainfall therein has been annually increasing.

In his "Gity of the Sainte" (1862), by that famous traveler from Arabia and the lake regions of Central Africa, R. F. Burton, in speaking of the climate of Utah he says: "Between April and October showers are rare; there are, however, exceptions, heavy downfalls, with thunder, lightning and hall. (Clouds without water is a proverbial expression; a dark heavy pall which, in woodland countries, would burst with its weight, here assis over the arid, sun-parched surface, and discharges its watery stores on the can yons and upon the mountains. During the first few years after the arrival of the Saints there was little rain either in spring or autumn; in 1860 it extended to the middle of June. The change may be attributed to cultivation and plantation; thus also may be explained the North American Iudians' saying that the pale face brings with him his rain. The same has been observed in Kansas and North America

Mexico, and is equally remarked by the natives in the Eastern hemisphere of Cairo, the Aden Coal Hole, and Kurra-

Cairo, the Aden Coal Hole, and Kurrachoo."

But while the planting and cultivation of trees, even in small groves, in desert regions, have brought down the rain where rain was unknown before, the people of Utah and adjoining Territories attribute the marked increase of their annual average rainfall within the last few years to those lines of iron of the main Pacific and its branch railroads, acting as electrical conductors. If this is true, we may reasonably count upon such an increased value of all our arid lands from the great plains to the Pacific, and from the British possessions to our Mexican frontier, from the building of our Northern and Southern Pacific railways, as will a thousand times over redeem all the costs involved in the construction of these roads. In any event, in a region where for fifteen years and more a steadily increasing annual rainfall has been so generally noticed in Utah, there is evidently a change at work in the climate, from which, within even a generation or two, we may count upon such a transformation of those arid regions as will make their former aterility and desolation appear incredible to the observing traveler.—[N. Y. Herald.

WHO BURNED COLUMBIA, S. C.1 Letter from General Sherman.

The Washington Chronicle, of the 14th. publishes the following interesting letter from General W. T. Sherman, in regard to the burning of Columbia.

To the Editor of the Chronicle Des Sir: When you applied to me some time ago for a material bearing on the controversy of who burnt Columbia, I gave you two burried pamphlets which I had obtained from Judge Holt, containing all the testimony taken in the cotton cases growing out of that event, and submitted to the mixed commission appointed to adjudicate those cases under the treaty with Great Britain. Judge Holt could have obtained the testimony of all the 8,000 or 10,000 officers and soldiers who were at or near Columbia when the confiagration occurred, but he thought he had enough without putting the Government to the expense of bringing more witnesses from a distance. I suppose he did not summon Col. Stone, who commanded the feading brigade of the Fifteenth Corps, because he did not know were to find him. I surely did not know were to find him. I surely did not know whis whereabouts till he voluntarily published his statement in my official report of the affair, published before the close of the war, when General Wade Hampton was fighting against the United States, and not when, as he alleges, he was a prisoner of wer. I referred incidentially to an important fact of which I had knowledge, that a small detachment of the Seventeenth Corps had passed over the Congarce, had entered Columbia and hoisted a flag on the new State House, in advance of the regular entry of the Fifteenth Corps, which had made a circuit to cross the two branches of the Saluda and Broad which make the Congarce. I treated the performance of this detachment as somewhat irregular, but the men who composed it have now become important witnesses, and I send herewith copies of their written statements, together with the official reports which explain the whole affair. The witnesses go back to a time three-quarters of an hour before the entry of the head of Stone's brigade, and about two hours absed of their statements, for they are for an hour before the entry of the head of Stone's brigade, and about two hours absed of the time I personally reached the place of burning, but

How DENKING CAUSE APOPLEXX.—It is the essential nature of all wines and spirits to send an increased amount of blood to the brain. The first effect of taking a glass of wine or stronger form of alcohol, is to send the blood there faster than common, hence the circulation that gives the rod face. It increases the activity of the brain, and it works faster, and so does the tongue. But as the blood goes to the brain faster than common, it returns faster, and no special barm results. But suppose a man keeps on drinking, the blood is sent to the brain so fast, in such quantities, that in order to make room for it the arteries have to enlarge themselves; they increase in size, and in doing so they press against the more yielding fisceid veins which carry the blood out of the brain and thus diminish their size, their pores, the result being that the blood is not only carried to the arteries of the brain faster than is natural or healthful, but is prevented from leaving it as fast as usual; hence, a double set of causes of death are in operation. Hence a man may drink enough of brandy or other spirits in a few hours, or even minutes, to bring on a fatal attack of apoplexy. This is literally being dead drunk.

Seminal Weakness.

Seminal emission is the consequence of selfabuse. This solitary vice, or depraved sexual indulgence, is practiced by the youth of both sexes to an almost unlimited extent, producing with unerring certainty the following train of morbid symptoms, unless combatted by science, dark spots under the eyes, pain in the head, ringing in the ears, noise like the rustling of leaves or rattling of chariots, uneasness about the loins, weakness of the limbs, confused vision, blunted intellect, loss of confidence, diminance, in approaching strangers, a dislike to form new sequaintances, a disposition to shun society, loss of momery, pimples and various eruptions about the face, heetic flushes, furred tongue, foxid breath, coughs, consumption, might event, monomants and frequently insanity. If railed be not obtained, you should apply immediately, either in person or by letter and have a cure effected by his new and scientific mode of treating disease, which never fails of effecting a quick and radical cure.
